POSTMASTER: MAIL ROOM

The Senate Confirms His Nomination—Bond and Commission.

The Senate has confirmed the nomination of John Harlow by the President to be Postmaster of St. Louis. The confirmation went through with a yea and no one objected. Mr. Harlow will probably receive a blank check on Thursday. He will have to secure the signatures of two or more men worth $750,000, as the bond is $975,000, and the nomination must qualify him twice the bond. Mr. Harlow will are little trouble about this, as he has received assurances from friends that they would esteem an honor to sign his bond, and when the bond is not so formidable as it appears. The Postmaster's subordinates who handle money are bonded to him personally and no bonds are kept on hand from day to day. All funds received are either paid out immediately on drafts from headquarters or are deposited in the Sub-Treasury at the close of business hours.

Unless absence from the city of gentlemen who will go on the bond delays, the completed bond approved by the District Attorney Reynolds will be mailed to Washington Saturday night. If it receives early attention the order of transfer may be telegraphed Wednesday or Thursday of next week. Mr. Harlow's commission will then probably arrive on Friday Saturday of next week, and then on February 1 Mr. Harlow will succeed Mr. Hyde as Postmaster.

COLLECTOR WENNEKER'S TRIP.
He Has Gone to See Department Officials,
 Not to Save His Scalp.
 The story printed in a morning paper to the effect that Collector of Internal Revenue Charles F. Wen-scalp, as one of the Congressmen was reaching for his hair s believed at the Custom-house without foundation. Mr. Wenker's object in going to Washington is to see the officials with whom he is corresponding to the end at he may learn their routine in the treatment of matters relating to his and similar offices. As he is new in the business there have been a number of questions as to form and practice arisen already which might lead to embarrassment if not settled now. Before leaving Mr. Wenneker completed his work. When he was appointed Collector the San-

was not in season. He gave bond and assumed the duties of the office. When he was confirmed became necessary to give a new bond. The same men who were on the former bond signed the second. F. G. Niedringus and Christian F. Niedringhaus are the principal men.

The second bond was presented to District Attorney George D. Reynolds, who has approved it and forwarded it to Washington.

MECHANICS' EXCHANGE ELECTION.
 Thomas J. Kelly Elected President Over
 Wm. A. Rutter.
 The Mechanics' Exchange annual election occurred to-day. It was the most interesting contest which has taken place in the Exchange for years. The candidates for the presidency were: Mr. William Rutter, who held the office during the past year, and Mr. Thomas J. Kelly. All the interest centered in the fight between these two. Both had worked hard for reelection and the result was in doubt until the polls men. The poles crossed promptly at 2 o'clock, and the judges then began counting the votes to announce the result to the large number of members who had waited around to hear it. The total vote cast was 129, of which Mr. Kelley received 81 and Mr. Rutter 48. The result was received with cheers. Mr. Kelley was led to the rostrum and Mr. Rutter was the first to congratulate him. He said a few words in thanks for the honor conferred. Mr. Rutter was then called on and made

Creek Chief and Five Kiowas Pass Through

Five Indians passed through St. Louis this morning. They were from the Indian Nation and had

Washington, D. C., on official business connected with the proposed transfer of their lands to the Government. One was a Creek chief. He has a wife with him and appeared quite civilized. The other three were leading men of the Kiowa tribe. They came as representatives of the wild tribes lately visited by the Cherokee Commission sent out by Congress. They were dressed in a queer garb and evidences of advanced civilization as displayed in the vicinity of Jay Gould's sheds, but did not care to investigate further and soon retired to their apartments in the Vandalla sleeper. One of them evinced a desire to take with him Officer Barrett's club, being attracted by the gaudy tassels. The officer would not have that way, however, and the savage left with a hint of disapproval. The Kiowas were in charge

A JUROR'S SICK CHILD.

IT CAUSES A CONTINUANCE OF THE MULLERY CASE UNTIL FRIDAY.

Mrs. Carlin, the Youngest Child, Takes a Seat Beside Her Father in the Court-Room—The Old Man and His Son Joseph Engage in Conversation—Yesterday's Testimony—A Remarkable Case.

L.D. John Mullery himself was the first person interested in his case to put in an appearance at the Probate Court this morning. The matter was not to come up until 11 o'clock, but the octogenarian blacksmith was on hand fully an hour earlier. He took a seat near a window and busied himself looking over a memorandum book.

In his mouth he had the usual piece of tobacco on which he chewed incessantly, as has been his custom since the trial commenced, he being an inveterate tobacco chewer. As on previous days the old man came into court alone, his wife, Mrs. Alva, not having made her appearance in the room since the trial commenced. Mrs. Carlin, for the first time since she gave her testimony, was at the trial. She came before the case was called on and had conversation with her father. Afterward she took a seat beside him at the table and remained there until the case was adjourned. It will be remembered she was subpoenaed as a witness against her father, but testified very strongly in his favor, stating most emphatically that she believed him to be of sound mind. Mr. Mullery introduced her to the reporters with the remark: "This is my youngest daughter, Mrs. Carlin. They say education and refinement open all doors. She has them. I leave all my daughters good education. A friend in need is a friend indeed, and she is that. Young men, they say I am insane, but, thank heavens, I am not. My mind is as sound and vigorous as it was twenty years ago. I hope the jury will not declare me insane, and I don't think they will."

Mrs. Carlin said: "I hope you reporters will treat my father kindly. I have not been at the trial more because I am a teacher at the Blair School and cannot get away. Mr. Joseph L. Mullery, who instituted the inquiry, made his appearance in court shortly after 11 o'clock, just as the case was called. Mrs. John J. Conroy, for the first time, was absent, though her husband was an early arrival on the scene. When the names of the jury were called one of the jurymen showed the Court a physician's certificate that he was very sick, and he asked to be excused. The jurymen, Mr. King, his child had an attack of fever. Upon hearing this announcement the counsel on both sides agreed that the case should be laid over.

They were not willing to proceed with the case until the jurymen were well, and they agreed that the case should be laid over until Friday morning. Mr. Mullery was standing near the door of the court-room as his father walked out.

"So, Joe, you are still fighting your father," remarked the old blacksmith as he gazed in a half kindly manner at his boy.

"I am not fighting my father," replied the son in a most respectful manner. "I am fighting for you. In time you will learn that I am your friend in this matter and have acted only in your interest."

Joe, a young man told me he would not do to his father what you have done to me for $100,000," said the old man.

"That may be his way of viewing the matter," remarked the son, "but I believe to be my duty to protect you from designing people, and I am endeavoring to do so."

"I never did a wrong thing to anyone in my life," the old blacksmith said, reproachfully, to his son.

"I know it, father, and I am only doing for you what I believe to be my duty."

The old man repeated outside the court and his son remained outside the court. Despite the fact that the children and father are fighting each other, the bond of affection exists between them and is constantly dropping out above the surface of the proceedings. The old man is not angry with his son, and he does not speak bitterly about his children, while they always speak of him with respect and affection.

AFTERNOON SESSION YESTERDAY. The court-room was again crowded when the case came up yesterday. Mr. Mullery was returned to the stand. Mr. Johnson asked her concerning her knowledge of certain deeds. The witness answered the questions raised by her father on his property at different times, it being the purpose of the defense to show that at no time did she know of her father's business affairs, and therefore unable to state whether he had properly managed them. The witness answered the questions, and then Mr. Garache on the direct examination asked her one or two minor questions and she came down from the stand.

Mr. Garache had not called. John Cordell was also called, and did not answer. The witness was Mrs. Mullery O'Neill. Mr. Garache asked for attachments returnable forthwith for all the witnesses, stating that he did not intend to call them all this afternoon, and hoped to close his side of the case to-day except the expert testimony.

John J. Conroy, son-in-law of Mr. Mullery, was placed on the stand. He stated that he was a common-law married man with Mrs. Mullery, and that he had known the defendant since 1856. In April, 1889, he married Mr. Mullery's daughter. The witness and Mr. Mullery were customers of each other. Mr. Mullery treated his children well. Until thirteen years ago, when the witness and Mr. Mullery had financial trouble, the defendant was a frequent visitor at the Mullery home. Mr. O'Fallon of the O'Fallon House, with whom the witness lived, and Mr. Mullery would witness that he and Mr. Mullery were born in the same year and in the same town in Ireland. As Mr. Mullery was not permitted to detail it further, Mr. Mullery had told the witness that he had lived in Ireland and worked there a number of years. He also told the witness he was shrewder than the witness. The witness said that the old man sometimes had "crank fits" as a result. Although Mr. Mullery's expenses were much smaller than formerly he spent far more money since meeting Mrs. Alva than he had before. His income was greater. The witness said he was at least $4,000 a year. The witness alleged that the defendant was bestowing his affections on more than one woman. Mr. Conroy admitted having borrowed about $2,000 from the defendant which he never paid him, and the defendant never paid witness what was due him. Mr. Conroy believed Mr. Mullery was insane ten years ago.

John Cordell, a blacksmith, 60 years of age, stated that he had known the defendant for years. He did not think him crazy, but believed he was "a little off on the woman question." He had noticed that Mr. Mullery, in conversation, would jump from one subject to another.

When Mr. Cordell had concluded his testimony an adjournment was taken until this morning.

Four Italian Schools to Be Established in the City of New York.

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.

New York, Jan. 21.—A very new experiment is about to be tried by the Italian Government in this city. At a meeting held yesterday there were present many influential gentlemen, including Consul-General Riva. Word had been received that at the express wish of King Humbert the Government had appropriated a large sum of money for the purpose of establishing four Italian schools in this city and Brooklyn and arrangements were made to put the scheme into execution. The project, which was approved by the board of education, was to select houses for the proposed schools and it was decided to locate one in Harlem, one in Thompson street, and another in Mulberry street. The Italian societies and private citizens will also contribute to the fund. The movement has already met with the approval of the Italian colony here, and the plan is to provide suitable schools where Italian children can receive the rudiments of education and be taught the English and Italian languages. Great care will be exercised by the management not to interfere in any manner with the local school authorities, so that all danger of a collision with the Board of Education may be avoided. The teachers will be selected with much care and candor, and will be subjected to a rigid examination as to their fitness and those who can furnish a diploma from an Italian college will have the preference. Religious training will be carefully avoided, and the practical secular features will probably be added to the course of instruction from time to time. It is likely that the institution will be opened early next month.

Switchtender Hopkins' Negligence Gets Him Into Serious Trouble.

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Jan. 21.—Chief Detective Humphrey of the New York Central Railroad Co., accompanied by Detective McCabe, swore out a warrant yesterday for the arrest of Switchtender Hopkins, in charge of the switch at New Hamburg. The detective says that Sunday morning the mail train due here at 6:30 o'clock was coming along at the rate of thirty miles an hour in the vicinity of New Hamburg. When it reached the switch near the depot the engine and the train following shot in on a sidetrack. Luckily the train was light, only about five persons being on board, and the engineer was enabled to bring the train to a stop. The complainant alleges that the switchman had been on a spree and was asleep at his post, allowing the switch to remain open. Hopkins was brought before the Recorder yesterday afternoon, and his trial was postponed to allow him to get counsel.

SINCE the great fire (not the Chicago fire, but the Crawford fire) hundreds of ladies have extended to Mr. Crawford their sympathies in his great misfortune, many of them saying that had his store been totally destroyed they would really not know where in the future to buy their dry goods, as "they always could get what they wanted at Crawford's and at a moderate price, which was saying more than they could of the other stores," all of which was no news to Mr. Crawford, as he has been aware of these facts for years. NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 21.—John Healy, a 13-year-old boy of Brooklyn, N. Y., has been in the city for the past four days and spending money lavishly. He purchased a camera, a new rifle, a watch and chain, a cartridge belt to wear around his waist and some clothes. He was arrested yesterday, and admitted that he stole $150 from Fanny Davenport, the actress, while in her employ. He had only $15 when arrested, but he had the camera, the rifle and the watch and chain, and the proprietor refunded most of the money, so the police have saved $34, awaiting Miss Davenport's claim. It is expected the boy will be sent to New York to-day.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—A call at Miss Davenport's flat, No. 110 West Thirty-ninth street, last night, showed that the actress had left there a few days ago for her home in Camden, Pa. An employee in the flat said that Miss Davenport knew of her loss. On returning from the theater Monday or Tuesday night last she piled $150 in a drawer of her desk in a small room in the flat. She then retired to the back room. "When she went next day to get the money it was gone," "Johnny," 15-year-old Healy, said. "I saw the money, Davenport's employ for several months, was missing, and suspicion rested on him at once. He performed the office of bell boy, and had access to the front room at all times."

A Railway Agent's Rich Find—Cupid and the Telegraph.

EL PASO, Jan. 21.—Quite a little furry was created at Paso del Norte by the discovery of a lot of smuggled goods. M. G. Goss, the agent of the railway company, in going through the yards found a car containing about $2,000 worth of cotton cloth. The case was reported and the property seized.

CORRUS CHRISTI, Jan. 21.—Yesterday William Woods, aged 19, eloped with Miss Alice Kennedy. Both are highly connected and the girl is handsome and rich. Woods' father is a Mayor of Rockport. The pair came here, but could not get a license, as Mayor Woods had telegraphed. So the pair took a buggy and drove to a town thirty miles from the telegraph. All is lovely now.

WHEN compared with runners, the winnings of the trotting horses are very small. Alcyon, the gray stallion by Alcyon, won more money than any other trotter or pacer on the turf in 1889. His success in the Hartford $10,000 guaranteed stake race lifted his total winnings far beyond the reach of Nelson, his next nearest competitor. In the appended table of big winners, the figures represent the net earnings, entrance fees having been deducted. Pacers are indicated by an asterisk (*).
